NM046: PUIN + HOOP - DOOR

RELEASE: NOVEMBER 13 2010

FORMAT: LIMITED CD IN HANDMADE SLEEVE / FREE MP3 DOWNLOAD

With the release of Door Puin + Hoop presents a rich trip through sound, encompassing the grey area between improvised music, post-industrial drone and glowing synthscapes. So far this Dutch trio - Roald van Dillewijn, Remco Verhoef, Erik Uittenbogaard - can put its name to an impressive catalogue of cd-r releases housed in inventive, self-made sleeves and boxes. Door is the first album by Puin + Hoop to be non self-released, but although they are with Narrominded now, Puin + Hoop still chose to produce the sleeves themselves this time. And they turned out lovely - but also very intricate and time-consuming.

Anyone who witnessed a performance by Puin + Hoop knows that the group assembles quite a mess onstage. Their huge collection of instruments, effects, electronics and mostly handcrafted noise generators can sometimes look like a complete chaos, still everything is in its right place within logical reach for the musicians. Musically there is a similar situation for the listener to be experienced. On first hearing the music on Door can be rough and difficult to relate to, but for the dedicated listener there is a world of musical detail and emotional richness to be discovered.

With this release Narrominded gives more body to its catalogue of improvised music. The most prominent release in this vein so far is the third Split LP featuring works by Dutch pianist Cor Fuhler and Swedish saxophonist Mats Gustafsson. In 2010 more improv-based music has seen the light of day through Narrominded, on releases by Het Fukking Licht and the Dutch/Croatian noise-improv project Quasi Quasi.
